Please don't let passengers the ability to use thier cell phones on board airplanes. I'm a road rep and fly more weeks than I don't. I firmly believe it would add to the stress and frustration of flying regularly, possibly to the point where instead of just having the idiot who doesn't know how to do anything other than shout when using his cell phone, you'll also have the idiot who insists on telling him/her to shut up loudly from a few rows back. Just like in movie theaters. And we're bound to have physical altercations...just like in movie theaters.

Please don't do it. I would beg if I thought it would sway the issue.
